Inhoud

Organisations can deliver products or services or a mix of them. For professionals in business administration is it important to understand this primary process so that they, independent of their role as for example manager or external consultant, are able to describe and analyse this process and based on their knowledge they can advise on possible improvements and on the implementation. The course Operations Management has the objective to create a strong linkage to practice this is realised by the Operations Management Assignment, but also the business simulation game will contribute to that.
